

Don't Go to the Job That "Isn't There"

IN to-day's eager rush for men there is a tendency on the part of employers to call for workers before the jobs are ready. This has resulted in loss of time and money to workmen, and has crippled important war industries.

In occasional instances workers have been drawn from all over the country, and then because the employers had been premature in their recruiting, they had to tell the men—"We may need you next month."

To do away with this unnecessary shifting of men, the Government has organized the U. S. Employment Service as a part of the Department of Labor. It has 500 branch offices and 20,000 U. S. Public Service Enrollment Agents covering the United States. It has definite knowledge of all manufacturing conditions and labor requirements the country over.

Workmen may depend upon this Government employment service, because it sends men only to jobs that are ready. It helps a man get the right job to be of greatest help to his country in helping to win the war.

President's Statement

"Industry plays an essential and honorable role in this great struggle as do our military armaments. We all recognize the truth of this, but we must also see its necessary implications—namely, that industry, doing a vital task for the nation, must receive the support and assistance of the nation."

"Therefore, I solemnly urge all employers engaged in war work to refrain after August 1st, 1918, from recruiting unskilled labor in any manner except through this central agency. I urge labor to respond as loyally as heretofore to any call issued by this agency for voluntary enlistment, in essential industry. And I ask them both alike to remember that no sacrifice will have been in vain, if we are able to prove beyond all question that the highest and best form of efficiency is the spontaneous co-operation of a free people."

WOODROW WILSON.

The Government urges every man now employed in useful work to stick to his job. Shifting about is costly to all. But if a man is out of work, or if he feels that a change in employment is necessary, he is urged to consult the U. S. Employment Service.

To win the war the Government must have maximum production in all war industries to support our army in France. Every worker wants to do all he can to help. Therefore the use of the U. S. Employment Service, when seeking employment, is a patriotic service and duty. Always make use of nearest office or agent.

MARRIED WOMEN MAY TEACH.

Married women may be employed in the schools of Arizona according to an opinion rendered by the Attorney General of Arizona to the State Council of Defense.

In some of the states the employment of married teachers is prohibited, owing to the shortage of teachers; a movement is on foot to repeal such laws as the country needs the services of women in the work to which they have been trained.

The Attorney General states that we have no law touching upon the subject, therefore, married women may be employed in our schools upon the same terms and conditions as if they were single.

COL. GREENWAY IS PROMOTED

Lieutenant Colonel John C. Greenway, of Bisbee, well-known throughout the state and who entered the army last fall as a major of engineers has had some tremendously interesting experiences at the front.

Last week Dwight B. Heard received from Lieutenant Colonel Greenway who has recently been promoted, a Boche helmet which Mr. Greenway obtained in the second battle of the Marne in which he was engaged for eight days. This helmet shows the deadly aim of the American troops, having two bullet holes through it, and is now on exhibition in the window of the Dwight B. Heard office in Phoenix.

The following is the latest news from Lieutenant Colonel Greenway: Somewhere in France, August 31, 1918.

Much has transpired since I wrote you. We have mashed back the Chateau-Thierry salient (in the second battle of the Marne) and largely driven back the Boche on the Ament salient and for the moment at least have taken the offensive away from him. A little personal history. After landing in France almost 10 months ago I put in four months on the general staff G IV (Co-ordination Section). I was glad at first because it gave me an opportunity to get the underlying facts and to learn what the A. E. F. was attempting to do and how it was attempting to do it. But I soon longed to get to the front. It seemed hopeless until one day General Pershing came along and I was introduced to him and he asked me if I was from Bisbee and then said: "You want to go to the front, don't you?" I told him that I did. He assigned me to the First Engineers. When I reported to this organization I found I was ranked by three West Point majors. When I found I was not to get a battalion I asked for command of a company and got it. After six weeks service on the Ament front I was transferred to the 101st Engineers and got a battalion. Served on the Toul front and was in the Chateau-Thierry fight (second battle of the Marne) my battalion fighting as infantry. After that fight the commanding officer recommended me for a lieutenant-colonelcy and got it. He asked me to enter the infantry and I am now a lieutenant colonel of infantry in a regiment of this same division. Have had a number of close calls but am still intact.

John C. Greenway.

Ice Boxes on Wheels

Refrigerator cars for carrying meat are ice boxes traveling on wheels.

Most people in America would have to go without fresh meat, or would have to pay more for what they could get, if it were not for these traveling ice boxes.

Gustavus F. Swift, the first Swift in the packing industry, saw the need of these traveling ice boxes before others.

He asked the railroads to build them. The railroads refused. They were equipped, and preferred to haul cattle rather than dressed beef.

So Gustavus F. Swift had to make the cars himself. The first one was a box car rigged up to hold ice. Now there are 7,000 Swift refrigerator cars. Each one is as fine an ice box as you have in your home.

Day and night, fair weather and foul, through heat and cold, these 7,000 cars go rolling up and down the country, keeping meat just right, on its way to you.

Thus another phase of Swift & Company's activities has grown to meet a need no one else could or would supply, in way that matched Swift & Company ideas of being useful.

When you see one of these Swift & Company cars in a train, or on a siding, you will be reminded of what is being done for you as the fruit of experience and a desire to serve.
